We are a plumbing and roofing company that has invested a lot of time and money into ensuring the health and safety of our staff through the years.

We have gone down the usual track of safety courses, inductions, literature and meetings in order to reiterate the importance of a safe site for employees but recognize that nothing beats the words of someone who has survived a workplace accident.

Rhett Brown spoke to our employees openly and engagingly, detailing the circumstances that led to his fall and how it has affected his life since. With his visit Rhett not only brought home to staff the reasons why we as a company put so much emphasis on safety but also earned the admiration and respect of all present by his positive endeavours – both personally and professionally.
