Wallace Corporation recently requested Rhett to address the workforce on why it's so important to have good Health & Safety practices throughout the Site.

Rhett wheeled himself into the hall, he was very direct in his approach and left nothing to the imagination on what it's like going from a fit and healthy individual to needing 24 hour care 7 days a week.

You could have heard a pin drop, the underlying message for the Wallace Team was, if there is something not safe and you are aware of it, take action immediately, don't be afraid to speak up. The feedback from the employees was very positive, you read about these things in the media but until you hear a first-hand account on how it's impacted on him personally, physically and emotionally, you don't really get it.

This chain of events is well worth listening to, our workforce has benefited from Rhett's advice, there is much more awareness of what can go wrong with a she'll be right attitude. Wallace Corporation would have no hesitation in recommending to any small/large business, Rhett's underlying message of sending employees home safely after a day's work.
