

Business Leaders' Forum
WORKPLACE HEALTH & SAFETY

Rhett Brown spoke at the launch of the Business Leaders' Health and Safety Forum on July 15, 2010, which was attended by the Prime Minister John Key, the Minister of Labour Kate Wilkinson and about 90 leaders of large New Zealand companies.

The Forum aims to encourage chief executives and managing directors to take a leadership role on health and safety in their own organisations, their industries and in the wider business community.

At the launch Rhett spoke about the impact his workplace accident had on his life, and gave his support to the Forum initiative. He conducted a number of media interviews, talking about his own experiences and the role leaders can play in preventing work accidents.

It was great for the Forum to have his support and endorsement at this event.
